October 1st 2017 26th Sunday of Ordinary Time - Year A - Matthew 21:28-32

In this week's gospel we see the very different temperaments of the two sons. The first one comes across as rough and rebellious but he eventually simmers down once he 'thinks the better of it'. The second son answers very positively immediately 'certainly sir' but he does not deliver. We can identify with both. We can feel the passion of Jesus, his frustration and his deep admiration for those who have listened to his call. At all times Jesus remains non violent. We are also reminded today that conversion does not leave our egos intact. It is always a humbling experience. When have we experienced receiving repeated messages that we should change our lives and did not listen? Who are the people that we eventually did listen to and had a real conversion to a better way of living?

Prayer:

Thank you Lord for those unconventional people who appear to ignore the 'right' way of doing things, and yet they have taught us something about true goodness. Forgive us Lord for the times we did not listen to the often repeated messages given to us that we would be better if we changed our ways. We considered those giving the message to be spiritually inferior or ignore the right way of doing things.

Help us to be the presence of Jesus in our modern world trying to develop local communities recognising each persons giftedness in bringing us all to make our way into the kingdom before the chief priests and elders.
