Statement from Archbishop Martin

The use of facemasks: I am being asked if the wearing of facemasks is obligatory during religious services. As you will have heard from the press release from this week the use of face coverings by all those attending indoor religious services is strongly recommended. This means that non-wearing of face coverings should only occur in exceptional circumstances. In certain circumstances, (and this would include smaller Churches or places that are not well ventilated) the wearing of face coverings is obligatory by virtue of the general norms and is legally binding.

The Framework Document of the Irish Bishops and the HSE guidance say that face coverings are obligatory on priests, deacons and lay ministers for the distribution of Holy Communion.

At the moment we are still only allowed 50 people in church for any ceremonies taking place including Mass, Funerals, Baptisms and upcoming Weddings, 1st Communions and Confirmations please be aware that this number can change at any time so keep an eye on our Facebook page or website for any updates
